Susan Still is a nationally recognized domestic violence survivor and speaker whose powerful story helped shift how the legal system views intimate partner abuse. After years of emotional, physical and psychological violence, Susan made the courageous decision to testify against her husband – whose brutal behavior had been captured on videotape, including footage he forced their son to record.

Dane Still is a powerful voice for children impacted by domestic violence. As the eldest son of Susan Still, Dane was only 12 years old when he was forced to videotape the abuse his mother endured at the hands of his father. The footage became part of a landmark legal case, and a symbol of the hidden toll domestic violence takes on children.
